

Questions for Jobseeker Town Hall, July 1, 2020

1. How can we filter the job search results to find jobs we meet the qualifications for and that provide a living wage?

There are many ways to filter and search in Wyoming at Work. We will put together some screen shots to help. Additionally, individuals can request job search assistance at their local Workforce Center. A list of locations is located here:

2. Is the training online only or in the office training or both? Also, how can we get a hold of a case manager?

The WIOA training is offered through eligible (approved) training providers across the state, for example Laramie County Community College. The list of training providers is available on the Wyoming at Work website. Some training is in person and some is online; it varies by program. If a program is on our list and an individual is eligible for one of our programs we may be able to assist with paying for the training. Case managers can be reached by phone. The phone numbers for each local Workforce Center are located here:

<http://www.wyomingworkforce.org/contact/employment/> Most of our centers are open 8-4 Monday through Friday.

3. What is Allison training?

Allison is an option for training available within the Wyoming at Work system; most of it is free. The WIOA case manager can show individuals how to access it. If there is a fee, as long as the individual is eligible for one of our programs and we can show it will lead to a credential or degree, we may be able to pay for it.
